

INTRODUCING A NEW MINOR:
POPULATION HEALTH SCIENCES

Population Health Management is one of the biggest initiatives in healthcare today. It's all about changing our healthcare model from one that focuses on disease treatment to one that promotes prevention and protection. Now the IU Richard M. Fairbanks School of Public Health allows you to discover the social, economic, behavioral, biological and environmental influences that can be the difference between a successful Population Health strategy and one that misses the target.

IDEAL FOR...

Students enrolled in baccalaureate programs at IU who are in good academic standing.

A great fit for students pursuing:

- Public Health
- Pre-Medicine
- Pre-Dentistry
- Social Work
- Pre-Law
- Biology
- Chemistry
- Physics
- Bioengineering
